

Richard Hartley

Richard.Hartley@anu.edu.au

Mathematical Computer Vision

We wish to identify the critical configurations for scene reconstruction of a set of points from their images in several views (stereo vision). A configuration is called critical if there is more than one possible configuration of a set of 3D points. Partial solutions for this problem are known, and it is likely that a complete solution is within reach.